Monetary Policy, Islamic Finance...

Chapter 1

Monetary Policy, Islamic Finance, and Islamic Corporate Governance: An Introductory Note

Toseef Aziz, Murniati Mukhlisin, Nashr Akbar and Muhammad Tahir

There are two main institutions which are concerned with the monetary policy, that is, executive government and central bank. The decisions of executive government are generally based on their political agenda whereas the decisions of central banks are based on the theoretical knowledge and practical experience of the technocrats. However, an agreement between two poles and sufficient condition for the implementation of the policies are necessary. Generally executive government is giving the policy targets to the central bank which is independently developing its own strategies for achieving the agenda of the executive government. In the following sections, an effort is made to review the relationship among the role of central banks, monetary policy, and corporate governance in the conventional as well as in an Islamic economy. This chapter is organized in the following manner. Section 1.1 visualizes the role of central bank in detail. In Section 1.2, a detailed discussion on the monetary transmission and corporate governance is provided. The relationship between monetary policy and corporate governance from the perspective of Islamic point of view is articulated in Section 1.3. Section 1.4 has shed some light on Shari'ah governance while Section 1.5 concludes the whole chapter.
